

Anita Fraser

Biographical Information

Anita obtained her Bachelor of Laws from the University of Saskatchewan in 2008 and joined McKercher LLP in 2009 after clerking with the Court of Queen's Bench for Saskatchewan. Her civil litigation practice is focused on health law, corporate commercial law and estate litigation. Her work in health law has afforded her experience with professional regulation, including the representation of healthcare professionals before regulatory bodies in the Province. Since 2013, she has presented biannually on professional regulation and liability matters at the University of Saskatchewan School of Rehabilitation Science.

In December 2016, having taken a one year leave from McKercher LLP, Anita graduated with her Master of Laws in Medical Law from Queen Mary University of London where much of her coursework focused on the regulation of healthcare professionals and the regulation of health systems. Her work experience and recent studies have reinforced her appreciation and commitment to the regulation of her own profession, and if elected, she welcomes the opportunity to contribute to policy decisions affecting the regulation of lawyers in Saskatchewan.

Reasons for Seeking Office

My work experience and recent studies have reinforced my appreciation and commitment to the regulation of professions in Saskatchewan. I believe professional regulation plays a critical role in building and maintaining trust with the public, as well as maintaining professional standards. I would very much like an opportunity to contribute to the policy decisions affecting the Law Society of Saskatchewan and bring my perspective as a New Lawyer.
